Southern Teachers is assisting Severn School as they seek a strong, intelligent, creative division leader to serve as its next Upper School Head and to advance the Upper School program consistent with the school's mission.

The Upper School Head will lead the Upper School, which serves approximately 420 students in grades nine through twelve. He or she will provide instructional and administrative leadership to an experienced and dedicated faculty, shepherding them in the division's work to develop and enhance its program. A contributing member of the administrative team, he or she is supported by, and will work collaboratively with, the Dean of Students, Grade Deans, Guidance Counselor, Academic Dean, and Administrative Assistant. The Upper School Head will work diplomatically with faculty and parents to build and sustain cooperating teams that form the basis of Severn's supportive educational community that values the dignity, self-worth, and potential of each individual.

The ideal candidate will have an advanced degree, sound background in curriculum, and successful teaching and administrative experience. He or she should possess strong organization and communication skills, a genuine affection for and knowledge about adolescents, and a passion and generosity of spirit that will cultivate respect among and support for students, colleagues, and parents, alike.

Located approximately five miles from Annapolis, Maryland, Severn School was founded in 1914 to provide academic preparation for the United States Naval Academy. Severn is a thriving coeducational day school enrolling nearly 860 students in grades preschool through twelve on two campuses – the Chesapeake Campus, preschool through grade five, and the Teel Campus, grades six through twelve. Though much has changed over the years, Severn's legacy of leadership and scholarship remains evident.
