Southern Teachers is assisting Hunter Classical Christian School in its search for an Assistant Head of School to support the Head of School in all aspects of operation and to help fulfill the school’s mission, vision, and philosophy of education. The Assistant Head will focus on strengthening the school culture, leading the faculty, developing curriculum, and providing operational support.

Reporting directly to the Head of School, the Assistant Head will promote a school culture built upon the values of Hunter Classical Christian School by leading daily and weekly chapel services, cultivating relationships with current students and parents, sharing the benefits of classical Christian education, and enforcing campus policies, including the dress code. By attending conferences and communicating with leaders at sister schools, the Assistant Head will grow in his/her knowledge of classical Christian education pedagogy. The Assistant Head will support the Head of School in faculty hiring, retention, and assignment of duties. He or she will assist with the admissions process, scheduling classes, and planning school-wide events; conduct parent, faculty, and student orientation and teach one or more middle school offerings in an area of specialty.

The ideal candidate will hold a graduate degree in educational leadership or another applicable field, at least five years of elementary or middle school teaching experience, proven leadership capabilities, and a team-building approach. He or she will have a love of classical Christian education and passion to guide children in their growth and development. The candidate must ascribe to Hunter Classical Christian School’s Statement of Faith.

Hunter Classical Christian School is a growing school in Manakin-Sabot, Virginia, an area just west of the city of Richmond, Virginia. Founded in 2010 and firmly committed to classical Christian pedagogy, Hunter Classical Christian School serves students in grades kindergarten through eight, and its mission is to challenge the mind, nourish the spirit, and develop the whole child in an atmosphere guided by Judeo-Christian principles. Hunter Classical Christian School’s core values are respect, excellence, and integrity.
