Southern Teachers is assisting Worcester Preparatory School as it seeks a visionary, empathetic, experienced educational leader to be responsible for all activities involving its 200 Lower School students, their families, faculty, and staff. Reporting directly to the Headmaster, the Head of Lower School supports and evaluates an exceptional staff; supervises the teaching process and academic programs; serves on the school's senior administrative team; maintains congruency with the school's mission; and shares responsibility for setting and implementing the school's strategic vision.

Founded in 1970, Worcester Preparatory School is a college-preparatory day school serving 550 students in prekindergarten through grade twelve. Students come from six different counties in Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia to the 45-acre campus on the Eastern Shore. The school's mission is to promote academic excellence through a college preparatory curriculum and to promote the all-round growth of its students personally, physically, socially, and academically through its curricular and extracurricular programs.

Worcester Preparatory School has established a traditional atmosphere in which students are encouraged to develop to the fullest of their intellectual ability. Within this framework, the school strives to teach students to think logically; read with understanding; write, communicate, and calculate with skill; employ mathematical concepts; use technologies effectively; apply the principles of good health; and appreciate the importance of history, science, language, literature, and the visual and performing arts.

WPS offers rigorous academic preparation for college-bound students. In addition, students are provided a pleasant, nurturing environment that enhances individual growth and self-discipline. Worcester's programs give students the opportunity to develop a positive sense of self-esteem and an appreciation of and respect for others. The school's goal is for each graduate to emerge as a rational person who is well prepared for a meaningful college and community life and able to contribute wisely and creatively to an ever-changing society.
